Scheuten Solar products certified for UK

Scheuten Solar is recently certified according to MCS BBA for their P6-54 and P6-66 solar module in the Multisol® series. The (MCS) Microgeneration Certification Scheme underlines the high quality and the long-lasting performance of the Scheuten Solar modules and opens the way for sales and project activities in the UK.

The BBA (British Board of Agrément) is one of UK's leading authorities offering approval of construction products, systems and installers. The BBA is impartially recognized throughout the construction industry in the UK and beyond.

Scheuten Solar has numerous sales offices worldwide, effecting in an extensive distribution network. Moreover Scheuten Solar develops and realizes large solar projects all over the world. The company has been exploring the highly potential UK solar market for some time now and looks upon this certification as the final step towards a successful introduction of Scheuten Solar in the UK. The MCS certificate (MCS005 Solar Photovoltaic Panels) enables the company to start marketing its durable and high quality solar modules.

Scheuten Solar teams up with partners that are also MCS-certified and believe in the same high quality standards. "After a busy year of preparations and intensive contact with potential customers now is the time to really get things going. Acquiring the MCS certification means that our sales team can rely on a first class product which has proven its quality in many successful projects in Europe", emphasizes Evert Vlaswinkel, Chief Commercial Officer Scheuten Solar.
